No. C 10-2679 BZ

ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF'S
MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT
AND DENYING DEFENDANT'S

Before the Court are the parties' cross motions for summary judgment.<sup>1</sup> Docket Nos. 44 and 50. The issue is whether defendant American Home Assurance Company breached its duty to defend its insured, plaintiff Career Systems Development Corporation, in two underlying lawsuits. The lawsuits were filed by two independent contractors, Geoffrey E. Woo-Ming and Darlene Hoyt, after their contracts for services were terminated by plaintiff. Defendant initially defended both actions, but then withdrew, forcing plaintiff to <sup>1</sup> The parties have consented to the Court's jurisdiction for all proceedings, including entry of final judgment under 28 U.S.C. § 636(c).

1 incur fees and costs in defending itself. Plaintiff, who 2 prevailed in both lawsuits, now seeks to recover its fees and 3 costs. For the reasons explained below, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED 4 that plaintiff's motion is GRANTED and defendant's motion is 5 DENIED.

6 Defendant first argues that it did not have a duty to 7 defend plaintiff because both underlying complaints failed to 8 allege a covered claim under the insurance policy. The policy 9 at issue provided plaintiff with coverage for personal and 10 advertising injury arising from "[o]ral or written 11 publication, in any manner, of material that slanders or 12 libels a person or organization or disparages a person's or 13 organization's goods, products or services," (i.e., coverage 14 for defamation). Bellasis Declaration, Ex. 2 at 112. In his 15 second amended complaint,<sup>2</sup> Woo-Ming, who was representing 16 himself, alleged that plaintiff, "through its agents, lied and 17 made false and damaging statements concerning Woo-Ming's 18 termination," such as accusing him of sexual misconduct, which 19 caused irreparable harm to his professional reputation.<sup>3</sup>

20 21 <sup>2</sup> Plaintiff requests that the Court take judicial 22 notice of the following documents filed in the Woo-Ming and 23 Hoyt lawsuits: (1) the underlying complaints, including all 24 amended complaints; (2) Hoyt's verdict form; and (3) a minute 25 order granting plaintiff summary judgment in the Woo-Ming action. Docket No. 46. Defendant does not object to this request and it is therefore GRANTED to the extent that the documents are used in the Court's analysis.

26 <sup>3</sup> Woo-Ming's form complaint alleged that plaintiff was 27 liable for: (1) breach of contract; (2) wrongful termination of 28 public policy; (3) intentional infliction of emotional distress; and (4) intentional interference with prospective economic advantage. Plaintiff prevailed in this action after the Court granted its summary judgment motion. Ex. 8. The Court's order found that Woo-Ming was an independent

1 Hoyt's factual allegations from her second amended complaint 2 included the claim that plaintiff's supervisor subjected her 3 to a series of harassing comments and actions that harmed her 4 reputation, such as accusing her of working outside of her 5 contract without permission, improperly billing her time, and 6 telling a co-worker that she was having a nervous breakdown 7 due to the harassment.<sup>4</sup>

8 The above allegations from Woo-Ming and Hoyt triggered 9 defendant's duty to defend because they created the potential 10 that both claimants could have recovered for the alleged 11 defamatory statements made by plaintiff's agents. See 12 Montrose Chem. Corp. v. Superior Ct., 6 Cal.4th 287, 300 13 (1993) (holding that the duty to defend is broad and the 14 insured "need only show that the underlying claim may fall 15 within policy coverage; the insurer must prove it cannot").
16 Contrary to defendant's argument, the duty to defend in 17 California does not require the underlying lawsuits to 18 specifically allege defamation as a cause of action for there 19 to be coverage. Scottsdale Ins., Co. v. MV Transp., 36 20 Cal.4th 643, 654 (2005) ("that the precise causes of action
21 pled by the third-party complaint may fall outside policy 22

23 _____
24 contractor. Id.

25 <sup>4</sup> Hoyt's lawsuit alleged the following causes of action 26 against plaintiff: (1) breach of contract; (2) breach of 27 implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing; (3) wrongful 28 termination in violation of California Government Code § 12940 and in violation of public policy; (4) intentional infliction of emotional distress; (5) negligence; and (6) violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act. The jury found that Hoyt was not plaintiff's employee and plaintiff was not liable under any of her causes of action. Ex. 7.

1 coverage does not excuse the duty to defend where, under the 2 facts alleged, reasonably inferable, or otherwise known, the 3 complaint could fairly be amended to state a covered 4 liability"); Barnett v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 90 5 Cal.App.4th 500, 510 (2001) (citing CNA Cas. of Calif. v.
6 Seaboard Surety Co., 176 Cal.App.3d 598, 606-607 (1986)) ("the 7 duty to defend arises when the facts alleged in the underlying 8 complaint give rise to a potentially covered claim regardless 9 of the technical legal cause of action pleaded by the third 10 party").

11 Pursuant to Scottsdale and Barnett, it was also not 12 necessary for Woo-Ming and Hoyt to have pled all of the 13 elements of defamation to trigger defendant's duty to defend.
14 Defendant's contention that Lindsey v. Admiral Insurance 15 Company, 804 F.Supp. 47, 52 (N.D. Cal. 1992), requires all 16 elements of a covered cause of action to be pled before 17 coverage attaches, misreads Lindsey and was rejected in 18 Barnett.<sup>5</sup> Barnett held that the claimant's allegation that 19 defamatory statements were published was sufficient to trigger 20 the duty to defend and there was no requirement for the 21 claimant to have also pled that the statements were false. 90 22 Cal.App.4th at 510. See also Elecs. For Imaging, Inc. v.
23 Atlantic Mutual Ins. Co., 2006 WL 3716481 at *4 (N.D. Cal.
24 2006) (declining to follow Lindsey because it did not address 25 controlling California law and relied on only one case, 26

27 <sup>5</sup> The dicta on which defendant relies was uttered in 28 the context of a complaint for harassment which alleged none of the elements of a claim for defamation, especially the uttering of a false statement of fact.

1 Lunsford v. American Guarantee & Liability Insurance Company, 2 775 F.Supp. 1574 (N.D. Cal. 1991), which was later reversed by 3 the Ninth Circuit).

4 Defendant correctly points out that it is not entirely 5 clear from Woo-Ming's complaint that the allegedly defamatory 6 statements were published to a third party, as opposed to 7 having been said only to Woo-Ming. Likewise, it is not 8 entirely clear from Hoyt's complaint whether defendant made 9 some of the allegedly defamatory statements or Hoyt implied 10 them from other statements or conduct. Nor is it alleged that 11 the statement that Hoyt was experiencing a nervous breakdown 12 was false. Under California law, when faced with allegations 13 that create a potential for coverage, the insured has a duty 14 to investigate. See CNA Casualty, 176 Cal.App.3d at 610.

15 ("Before an insurer may rightfully reject a tender of defense, 16 it must investigate and evaluate the facts expressed or 17 implied in the third party complaint as well as those which it 18 learns from its insured and any other sources") (internal 19 citations and quotations omitted). Here, defendant did 20 initially provide a defense to both actions, during the course 21 of which it reviewed discovery that was conducted with respect 22 to Woo-Ming and Hoyt. In a letter informing plaintiff that it 23 was denying coverage and would be withdrawing from defense of 24 the Hoyt action, defendant acknowledges its duty to 25 investigate and summarizes what it has learned about the 26 coverage issues from discovery, including from Hoyt's 27 deposition and her responses to interrogatories. See Stinson 28 Declaration, Ex. 2. Nowhere does it mention that it has

1 learned that the Hoyt statements were not published or were 2 true. The same is true for the Woo-Ming action. Nowhere in 3 defendant's investigation of Woo-Ming's claim does it appear 4 that defendant learned that the allegedly defamatory 5 statements were not published. See Bergen Declaration, Ex. 1; 6 Stinson Declaration, Ex. 2. It therefore appears that after 7 conducting its discovery and investigation, the potential in 8 Hoyt and Woo-Ming still existed for a defamation claim. Yet 9 in each case, defendant withdrew from its defense.

10 Nor can, defendant escape its duty to defend by arguing 11 that plaintiff had valid defenses to Woo-Ming and Hoyt's 12 defamation allegations. Although plaintiff may have 13 eventually prevailed at trial by establishing that the alleged 14 statements were not defamatory because they were "rhetorical 15 hyperbole" or privileged under California Code § 47c, the 16 availability of valid defenses does not relieve the insurer 17 from the responsibility of defending its insured. See 18 Garriott Crop Dusting Co. v. Superior Court, 221 Cal.App.3d 19 783, 796 (1990) ("the duty to initially defend Garriott exists 20 regardless of potentially meritorious defenses to the City's 21 claims"); Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B., 4 Cal.4th 1076, 22 1086 (1993) ("If Barbara B's claims were indeed so 23 insubstantial as not to warrant any damages, Horace Mann 24 should have raised that defense in the underlying action for 25 [the claimant's] benefit, rather than in this declaratory 26 relief action to his detriment").

27 I therefore find that plaintiff has established that Woo-28 Ming and Hoyt's complaints contained factual allegations that

1 raised the possibility of coverage under the policy (e.g., 2 Having concluded that there was a potential for coverage under 3 the policy, the next issue is whether any of the policy's 4 exclusions applied to Woo-Ming and Hoyt's lawsuits. Under 5 this analysis, the burden is on defendant to prove that the 6 underlying claims were specifically excluded by the policy.

7 MacKinnon v. Truck Ins. Exch., 31 Cal.4th 635, 648

8 (2003) (citing Aydin Corp. v. First State Ins. Co., 18 Cal.4th 9 1183, 1188 (1998)). Exclusionary clauses are strictly 10 construed and must inform the insured about the exclusion in 11 "clear and unmistakable language" to be effective. Id.
 12 (citations omitted).

13 According to defendant, the Employment Related Practices 14 (ERP) exclusion allowed it to not defend plaintiff against the 15 underlying lawsuits. This exclusion provided that the policy 16 did not apply to:

17 "Bodily injury" to:

18 (1) A person arising out of any:

- 19 (a) refusal to employ that person;
- 20 (b) termination of that person's employment; or
- 21 (c) employment-related practices, policies, acts or omissions, such as coercion, demotion, evaluation, reassignment, discipline, 22 defamation, harassment, humiliation or discrimination directed at that person...

23 This exclusion applies:

- 24 (1) Whether the insured may be liable as an employer or in any other capacity...

25 Bellasis Declaration, Ex. 1 at 41.

26 Plaintiff contends that this exclusion only applies to 27 lawsuits filed by employees and does not exclude lawsuits 28 filed by independent contractors. It relies on North American Building Maintenance, Inc. v. Fireman's Fund Insurance Company

1 which held that a similar ERP exclusion did not apply to a 2 lawsuit filed by employees of the insured's independent 3 contractor. 137 Cal.App.4th 627, 642-44 (2006). NABM 4 explained that the term "as an employer or in any other 5 capacity" was ambiguous and found that a reasonable 6 understanding of the language in the exclusion is that it only 7 relates to actual, former, or prospective employees which does 8 not include the employees of an independent contractor. Id.
9 Other courts have reached a similar conclusion when 10 interpreting analogous ERP exclusions. See e.g., National 11 Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh Pa. v. Starplex Corp., 188 12 P.3d 332, 349 (Or. App. 2008) (holding that the ERP exclusion 13 did not apply to claims filed by employees of the insured's 14 independent contractor).

15 Defendant, however, argues that the ERP exclusion bars 16 coverage for all employment-related claims, including those 17 filed by independent contractors who are essentially in an 18 employment relationship with the insured, relying on Insurance 19 Commissioner v. Golden Eagle Insurance Company, an unpublished 20 decision from the California Court of Appeal. 2007 WL 908519 21 (Cal. App. 2007). In Golden Eagle, the insured claimed it was 22 owed a defense because the employee who sued was not its 23 employee but that of a sister company and therefore the ERP 24 exclusion did not apply. Id. at *5. The Golden Eagle court 25 assumed the underlying claimant was employed by the sister 26 company, but found that this was a distinction without a 27 difference because there "is no requirement in either version 28 of the ERP exclusion that the 'person' bringing such

1 employment-related complaints be an employee of the insured."
2 Id. at *6. One of the reasons Golden Eagle distinguished 3 NABM, which was brought to its attention by the insured during 4 oral argument, was that in NABM it was clear, unlike in Golden 5 Eagle, that the claimant worked for a separate entity that had 6 no relation to the insured. Id. at *7-8.

7 I follow NABM and find that the ERP exclusion does not 8 apply to Woo-Ming and Hoyt's claims. First, NABM is the 9 controlling authority. Both parties agree that I am to apply 10 California law to this dispute. Under California Rule of 11 Court 8.1115, unpublished decisions from the California Court 12 of Appeal, such as Golden Eagle, cannot be cited or relied 13 upon by a court or a party in any action. See Jimeno v. Mobil 14 Oil Corp., 66 F.3d 1514, 1529 n. 8 (9th Cir. 1995); Quintero 15 v. U.S., 2011 WL 836735 at *3 (E.D. Cal. 2011).<sup>6</sup> Second, 16 Golden Eagle addressed NABM without the issue being briefed by 17 the parties. Furthermore, Golden Eagle considered whether the 18 ERP exclusion applied to a claimant that may have been an 19 employee of both the insured and another entity rather than an 20 independent contractor, which is the question analyzed here 21 and more analogous to the issue presented in NABM.

22 Finally, I find NABM persuasive. The burden is on the 23 defendant to show that its policy exclusion is "clear and 24 unmistakable." See MacKinnon, 31 Cal.4th at 648. As the NABM 25 court explained, the language of the ERP exclusion is

26 27 <sup>6</sup> While it is true that courts in this Circuit have at 28 times cited to unpublished California decisions, such decisions are considered to have no precedential value. See, e.g., Employers Ins. of Wausau v. Granite State Ins. Co., 330 F.3d 1214, 1220 n. 8 (9th Cir. 2003).

1 ambiguous at best and may reasonably be interpreted as 2 applying to only employees and not independent contractors.
3 137 Cal.App.4th at 642 ("the other language of the [ERP] 4 exclusion relates primarily to claims that could only arise in 5 situations of employment, former employment, or prospective 6 employment"). If defendant wishes to exclude independent 7 contractors from coverage, the simple solution is to 8 specifically include such language in its insurance policies.
9 Because the policy as written is unclear and courts are 10 mandated to strictly construe any exclusions to coverage, I 11 find that the ERP exclusion does not apply to independent 12 contractors such as Woo-Ming and Hoyt.<sup>7</sup>

13 Lastly, defendant argues that the policy excludes any 14 "personal and advertising injury" that arises out of a breach 15 of contract which results in no coverage for the underlying 16 claims because they stemmed from Woo-Ming and Hoyt's

17 ///

20 <sup>7</sup> Defendant points out that plaintiff obtained a 21 separate Employment Practices Liability (EPL) policy that 22 provided coverage, subject to a $100,000 self-insured 23 retention, for employment-related claims such as wrongful 24 termination, discrimination, and defamation. This EPL policy 25 defined covered employees to specifically include independent 26 contractors as long as plaintiff provided indemnification to 27 such contractors in the same manner as its employees.
28 Defendant argues that plaintiff purchased the EPL policy because it understood that the ERP clause would exclude employment-related claims made by independent contractors.
That is not necessarily the case. Plaintiff may have purchased the EPL policy to protect itself against employment-related claims from its employees while still having the reasonable expectation, based on the ambiguous language of the ERP exclusion, that independent contractors would be covered under its general liability policy.

1 employment contracts.<sup>8</sup> Bellasis Declaration, Ex. 2 at 104.
2 While some of the underlying claims arose directly from Woo-3 Ming and Hoyt's contractual relationship with plaintiff, the 4 duty to defend is triggered whenever there is any potential 5 for coverage. The allegations in Woo-Ming and Hoyt's 6 operative pleadings, created a potential that plaintiff would 7 be liable for publishing defamatory statements against Woo-8 Ming and Hoyt. Because liability for such statements would 9 constitute the separate tort of defamation and have no 10 relation to any contract between the parties, the "breach of 11 contract" exclusion does not apply.

12 For the foregoing reasons, I find that Woo-Ming and 13 Hoyt's claims triggered defendant's duty to defend plaintiff.
14 This duty was not extinguished by any of the exclusions from 15 the policy. IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that plaintiff's motion 16 for summary judgment is GRANTED and defendant's motion for 17 summary judgment is DENIED with respect to plaintiff's breach 18 of contract claim. I do not rule on plaintiff's "insurance 19 bad faith claim" because plaintiff has requested permission to 20 first conduct discovery about this issue and the possibility 21 of such discovery was contemplated at the status conference in 22 February. See Docket Nos. 39 and 43. The parties are ORDERED 23 to meet and confer and file a joint statement by September 28, 24 2011 discussing the remaining issues in this matter and 25 <sup>8</sup> When defendant initially withdrew its defense in the 26 underlying lawsuits, it cited the ERP exclusion and the Golden 27 Eagle case as its reason for not having to provide plaintiff 28 with a defense. Stinson Declaration, Exs. 1 and 2. Defendant did not argue that the "breach of contract" exclusion applied to Woo-Ming and Hoyt's claims and it now raises the exclusion for the first time in its motion.
